Telling a Story

THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

- Do your research,
  - What kind of building is it?
  - Industrial
  - Farming
  - Downtown
- What kind of Architecture is it?
  - Building found in Texas looks far different than one found in the northeast area of the United States
- What era is it?
  - Home Depot did not exist during the 50's
- Does the location make sense?
  - Urban buildings in a urban setting
  - Rural buildings in a rural setting
- Does the structure and vignette tell a story?
  - What are you trying to tell the person viewing the scene?

Telling a Story

Lee's Tanker Flush on Chip Romig's layout.

Named after a local model railroader named Lee Johnson.

As Chip tells the story, Lee and his Tanker flush business are solely responsible for the creation of the ESPA because he simply washed the remnants of the tanker loads into a drain pipe that vented down the hill and into a local stream

Telling a Story

Telling a Story

Telling a Story

Telling a Story

Allan Gartner

Telling a Story

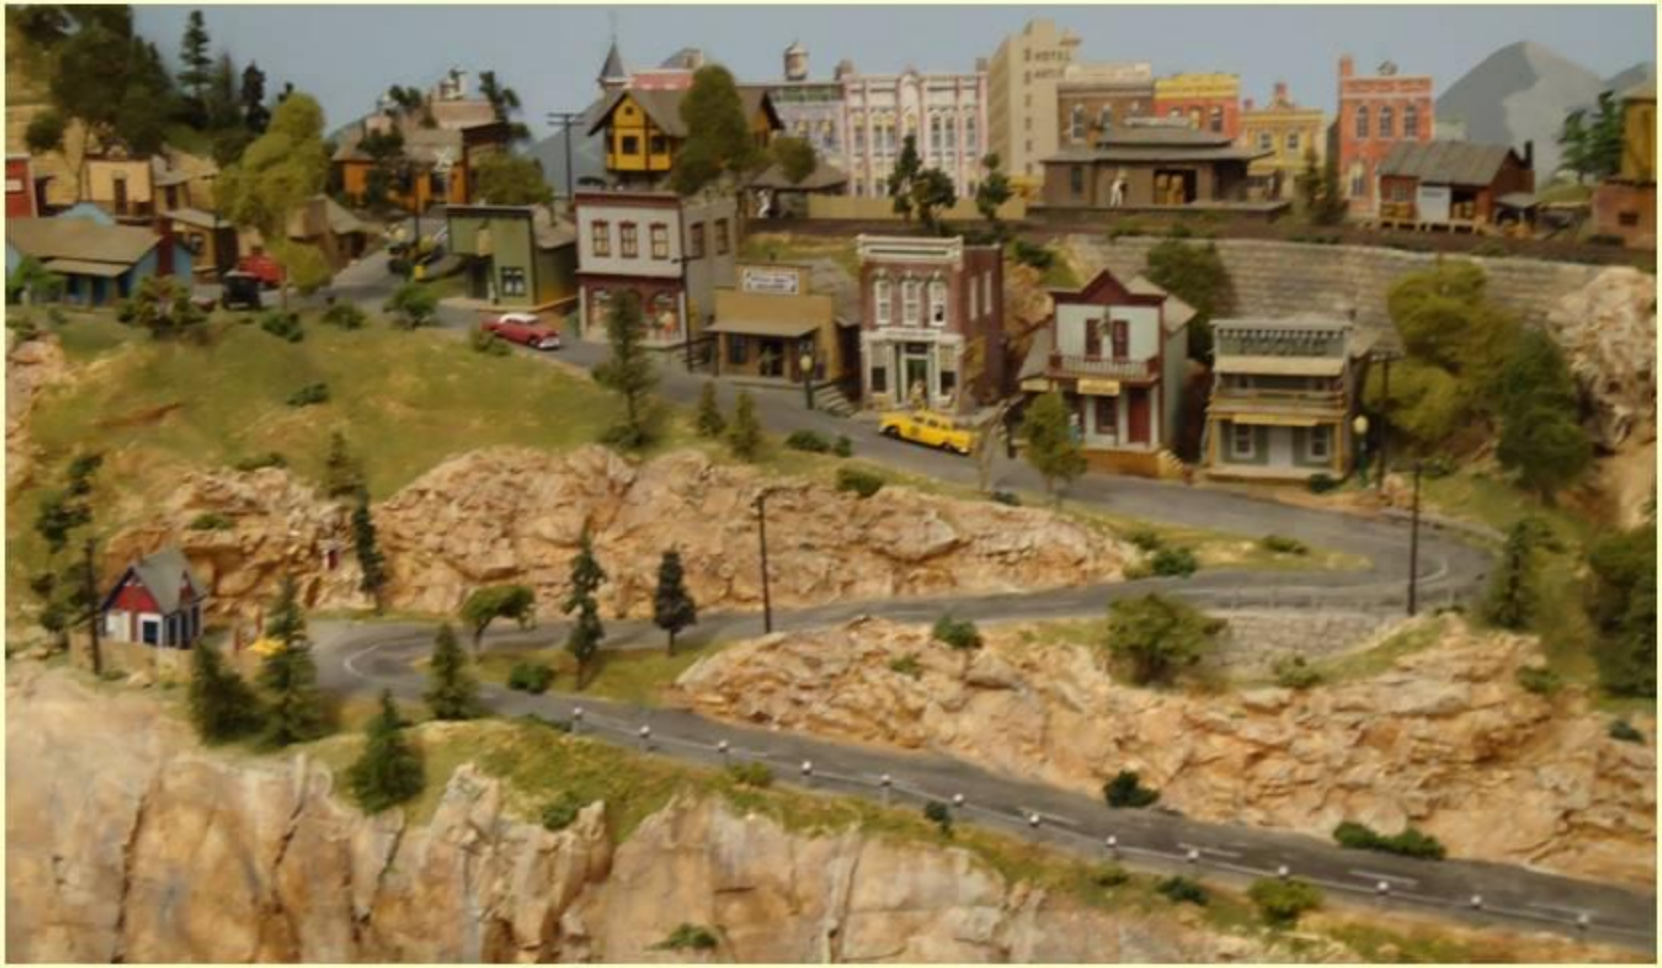
Telling a Story

Telling a Story

Larry Swigert

Telling a Story

Telling a Story



Inspired by Malcolm Furlow article on Sheridan Colorado

Telling a Story

Gil Frietag

Telling a Story

Larry as a kid

Telling a Story

Petticoat Junction

M.A.S.H

Telling a Story

Educational Story

Telling a Story

Telling a Story

Telling a Story

Allan Gartner